

I'm not robot!

- Assessment: Make sure you have all the facts about the ethical dilemma and ask these questions:
  - Does it abide by the law?
  - Does it align with the PMI Code of Ethics and Professional Conduct?
  - Does it agree with your employer's and client's code of ethics and conduct?
  - Does it align with your ethical values and those of the surrounding culture?

If it does not abide by the law seek legal counsel. If the answers to the above questions provide substantial facts to make a case, go to the next step. If you are not sure, you may need to gather more facts or ask a trusted person for advice.
- Alternatives: Consider your choices by asking the following questions:
  - Have you listed possible alternative choices?
  - Have you considered pros and cons for each possible choice?

If the answers to the above questions result in a viable solution, go to the next step to analyze your candidate decision. If not, you may need to gather more facts and complete your research.
- Analysis: Identify your candidate decision and test its validity with these questions:
  - Will your candidate decision have a positive impact or prevent harm to project managers, PMI staff or volunteers, clients, your employer's organization, other stakeholders, the environment, or future generations?
  - Does your candidate decision take cultural differences into account?
  - Looking back, will this decision seem like a good idea a year from now?
  - Are you free from external influence to make this decision?
  - Are you in a calm and unstressed state of mind?

If the possible impacts are acceptable, proceed to check your decision against ethical principles in the next step. If not, consider taking time to test another candidate decision, review your options and/or your case.
- Application: Apply ethical principles to your candidate decision by asking these questions:
  - Would your choice result in the greatest good?
  - Would your choice treat others as you would like to be treated?
  - Would your choice be fair and beneficial to all concerned?

If these or other traditional philosophical questions evoke doubts or seem to create a new dilemma, you might need to reconsider your decision, review the facts, the options, and the implications. If the answer is "Yes" and your candidate decision seems consistent with other ethical principles, move to the next step to decide and take action.
- Action: Make a decision after considering these questions:
  - Are you willing to accept responsibility for your decision?
  - Could you make your decision public and feel good about it?
  - Are you ready to act?

If you are comfortable with your decision, take action. If not, retrace these steps to discover a better solution.
